

National Center for Education Statistics - National Household Education Surveys Program 2012 - Parent and Family Involvement in Education Survey

The following results are based on the Parent and Family Involvement in Education Survey, which is administered by the National Center for Education Statistics as part of its National Household Education Surveys Program. The survey was conducted between January and August 2012 and administered to a nationally representative sample of 17,166 parents with schoolchildren.

Parents were asked to indicate their level of satisfaction with five aspects of their child's school: (1) the school overall, (2) the child's teachers, (3) the academic expectations at the school, (4) the discipline and order at the school, and (5) the way the school staff interacts with parents. For each item, four responses categories were available: (1) very satisfied, (2) somewhat satisfied, (3) somewhat dissatisfied, and (4) very dissatisfied. For parents with multiple children, a single child was randomly selected for the purpose of responding to the items on the survey.

The following tables display the percentage of parents, both for the full sample and various subgroups, who indicated a particular level of satisfaction for each of the five aspects of their child's school. Raw percentages as well as those that are adjusted for demographic background characteristics are shown. Adjusted percentages control for the respondent's education, income, race, homeowner status, region, and whether the respondent lives in an urban area. Figures have been rounded to the nearest percentage point. Thus, columns may not always sum to 100 percent.

For further analysis of the results and additional methodological details, please see "How Satisfied are Parents with Their Children's Schools? New evidence from a U.S. Department of Education survey" by Albert Cheng and Paul E. Peterson, available at <http://educationnext.org/how-satisfied-are-parents-with-childrens-schools-us-dept-ed-survey>.
